

THE COMMONWEALTH.

FRANKFORT.

MONDAY, JANUARY 11, 1864.

We publish in another part of this day's paper, the remarks of Hon. JOSEPH F. BELL, in the House of Representatives of Kentucky, upon the adoption of the resolutions announcing the death of the Hon. JOHN J. CRITTENDEN. They contain a beautiful and just tribute to Kentucky's departed statesman.

Mr. Bell handed us the manuscript of his remarks just as he was leaving for home before the recess, but we concluded to defer their publication until the re-assembling of the Legislature, that all the members might have a copy of them.

We noticed in our city some days ago, the well known faces of our old friends Gen. Boyle, Col. Hanson, and Col. M. Mundy.

Night before last a detachment of the 23d Kentucky Infantry, arrived in our city, bringing the war worn flag of that regiment. They report the regiment in excellent health and spirits, and anxious to be led to victory. This regiment is now under the command of Col. G. W. Monroe. He needs no word of praise from us, his reputation is surpassed by none of his companions in arms.

The Hop Friday night was a complete success. We noticed many strange beauties in attendance. We hope the series of Hops, just commenced, will continue as successful as they have begun.

We call attention to the advertisement of J. B. Lampton, in another column of our paper. It will be seen that he has a variety of reasonable goods which the Ladies, particularly, will do well to examine.

The river is still frozen over at this point and above, thus effectually shutting out from the market the large surplus of wheat lying on its banks.

The regiment now being organized at this place is fast reaching its completion. Success to you Col. Craddock.

Col. Roy S. Clarke, of the 8th Kentucky cavalry of the Confederate army, died a prisoner of war at Johnson's Island on the first day of this year. He was a native of Clarke county, Ky., served nobly in the Mexican war as a private in the 2d Kentucky regiment, but the honors which he won at Buena Vista were clouded by the fatal decision which impelled him to raise a regiment of rebel cavalry when Kirby Smith occupied our State, and he has fallen a victim to disease contracted while engaged in predatory expeditions of General John Morgan.

It will be seen from an advertisement in our paper that a small change has been made in the time of the arrival and departure of the cars on our railroad. Those who travel will do well to notice it, or they may be left behind.

Masonic Notice.

The Members of Hiram Lodge, No. 4, F and A Masons, are hereby notified that the place of meeting has been changed. The meetings hereafter will be held in Odd Fellows Hall, on Broadway street. The next meeting will be on Monday night, the 11th January, 1864, at 7 o'clock, P. M. By order of the Lodge.

G. W. LEWIS, Sec'y.

Richmond Market.

The following specimens of humorous exchange originates with our spy little temporary, the Pulaski (Tenn.) Chant. The first telling excited by reading perhaps with all, be one of our boys' laughter. The "saber second" bringing a "saber" pathy with the suffering of innocent millions—women, children, and other helpless classes, who have done, and could do, nothing to promote or to repress the insane strife, which brings them to unrelieved calamity. Our extract is indeed a caricature; but it is also the exaggerated picture of a miserable reality.

Editor CHATTEAUGUS: Having just escaped from the kingdom of Jeff Davis—leaving Richmond about ten days since—I furnish you with very late and most reliable report of the markets when I left there, satisfied that it will be ahead of anything yet received from that quarter. At another time I may give you further intelligence from Dixie.

Flour—Twenty-five pounds imported by Brown & Co., by carrier pigeons, still in first hands. Flour, in small quantities, is jobbing readily at 70¢/80¢ per pound. We notice four pounds to the Mayor on private terms.

Pork—The barrel imported overland via Santa Fe, Texas and Vicksburg, before that city was taken, is nearly all in the hands of the jobbers. Sales of three pounds of Hog round, at $2, half cash, the remainder in a note of four months, secured by a bushel of Confederate States of America bonds. A half barrel will accrue in January, if the man's hogs don't die in the meantime of starvation. This will overstock the market, and make the street where the hog owner lives, nearly as busy as ever.

Monetary—A man who ran the blockade at Wilmington, brought a sovereign and a Spanish quarter, most of which has been put in circulation here, and has produced unprecedented activity among our business men. Confidence has, in a great measure, been restored, and our merchants, who have been mowing the grass which grew in the principal streets during the past summer, will most of them resume trade by peddling peanuts and Lucifer matches during the ensuing month.

Candy—Sale of six sticks to the purser of the floating battery of hydraulic ram on private terms, the market has a downward tendency. Candy is jobbing in sticks at 87¢/90¢.

Potatoes—We notice the arrival of a peck from near the Dismal Swamp. No sales. An old contraband, who lives on the south side of James River, is said to have a quarter of an acre. This keeps the market depressed.

Dry Goods—Sales of ten cotton handkerchiefs by Todd, Dupuy & Co., at $16¢/23¢, indorsed notes six months.

Cotton—The arrival of one bale from the coast, per mule back, threw the city into confusion. Such an accumulation of the precious staple in Richmond it was thought would attract the cupid of the Northern mercenaries, and precipitate an attack before the military defenses were complete. The Provost Marshal sent the cotton back at the expense of the owner.

Tobacco—Unusual scarcity exists in Virginia leaf. Four plugs were sold on Change, on Saturday last, to parties who wished to send to Atlanta. A good sale has sprung up in old quids. They are collected by the blacks, put up neatly in tin foil and sold to new beginners. The price ranges according to the number of times chewed. The third chewing is made up into snuff.

Whisky—This necessary article is going down every day, though not in price. The figure now for a common-sized drink are $14.75; to wet your tongue, $10; to smell the cork, $4.75; to look at the bottle, $1.17, and 61 cents to say whisky aloud. There was a charge made of 25 cents for passing a saloon, but that tax has been removed by the Legislature. A pint of the fluid was bought by a wealthy planter early in September. It cost him a substantial load of Confederate notes, four niggers and a hoghead of sugar. This seems almost incredible.

Brutality and Immodesty in a Boston Public Institution.

The revelations just made public by the prison inspectors appointed annually to visit the Boston reformatory institutions, afford another proof that people may be so distressed by evils existing in a foreign land as to entirely overlook as gross ones directly at their own doors.

Deer Island is the place where these reformatory schools are situated. There boys with habits likely to trouble society, and young girls destitute of a wholesome corrective influence over their lives at home, are taken in charge, schooled and educated, so as to restore them to society with improved morals and a sense of self respect that will be their future protection. One would think that the aim and objects of such institutions, to say nothing of the youth and the sex of many of its inmates, would have saved them from the brutality of corporal punishment, and induced such regulations as would tend to preserve the sense of modesty among them.

This supposition, however natural, appears not to have entered into the superintendent's idea of what wholesome discipline should be. He not only has public baths for the females, but he himself performed the task of hogging them "with all his might." Thereport says: "The prisons are provided with the ordinary bath tub, from three to seven in number, and placed side by side, at distances from twelve to twenty-four inches apart; these are all in open rooms, without any screen or protection whatever, and in these, publicly exposed to the prisoners, men, women, and girls, in their respective departments, in groups of from three to seven, are required to perform their ablutions. Old offenders, young offenders, girls of nine and ten years of age, alike must disrobe themselves, and in full observation of their fellows and officers, in a state of utter nudity, enter the bath, perform its duty, and partake of its refreshment.

After this moral lesson, it is not very surprising to find that such a brute should think hogging women was other than wholesome discipline. But the fellow testifies to his own unmanliness and brutality by showing how he reduced a young woman of seventeen to obedience. The girl was high spirited and proud. She frankly confessed to a fault, but would not submit voluntarily to degradation. The superintendent did not attempt to win her by kindness, though she was a girl easily brought to reason by such influence. He procured a rat, half an inch in diameter and twenty inches long, and with this he struck the poor thing with "all his might," over the neck and shoulders, "leaving marks as large as the palm of his hand." This was not sufficient for the brute, and he sent for a larger stick, and "then she held out her hand."

After this beating and this submission, she was confined to the cell and the food of the solitary, where the Prison Inspectors found her eighteen days after the inhuman hogging thus inflicted. This was only, however, a portion of the duty he seemed to delight in, for he also testifies that in the girls' department he sometimes "performed the hogging with an ordinary wagon whip." It is a remarkable commentary on the whole conduct of this public institution, that after the publication of these facts, the Directors of the institution published a card, in which they state that they know all that is going on in the prison under their charge, and that they have much confidence in their superintendent at Deer Island.

Formidable Attack by Bees.

Huber, Revan, and other naturalists who have studied the extraordinary habits and instincts of bees, have not yet succeeded in discovering the various circumstances which lead those justipets to attack men in a hostile spirit. "How far revenge or retaliation for injuries received, influence them, is but imperfectly unknown. There is proof that, when the queen bee dies, the hive is thrown into confusion and agitation; and it has been supposed by many persons that the insects, at such a time, would seek to attack any one who may have been concerned in the death of the great mother. This, whether right or wrong, was the suggested explanation of an extraordinary attack by bees, in Prussia, in 1820. As narrated in the Berliner Zeitung, the incident was as follows:

On the 20th of July, M. Euler, a merchant of Berlin, was traveling with his wife from Wittenburg to that city; they were in a private carriage, and a coachman was driving. While passing along the high road, between Kropstadt and Schmogelsdorf, the coachman observed the horses to rub uneasily against each other, as if stung by a horse fly. Suddenly a swarm of bees appeared, or a collection of swarms, numerous beyond all reckoning. They covered the carriage, horses, travelers and coachman, but more especially the living beings. They attacked the mouth, nose, and ears of each horse, until the poor animal, quite overcome, lay down unresisting. The coachman lost his hat while endeavoring to aid the horses, and the bees then fastened upon his head with such avidity that his poor skull became covered with a matted mass of bees, hair, and blood; he threw himself on the ground in desperation, and he became for a time insensible. Madame Euler, as soon as the attack began, covered her face with her hood, got out of the carriage, hastened to a neighboring field, and threw herself face downwards, on the grass.

M. Euler, then alighted and shouted for help; but while his mouth was open some of the bees entered it and increased his troubles. He then covered his face and neck with a handkerchief, and ran to a place where he saw three peasants looking on; but they were too much alarmed to help him, and so he ran on further. He then met a woodman, a carrier with a cart and three horses, and some laborers. After much entreaty the carrier agreed to put his horses into a neighboring stable and, to accompany M. Euler, as did the others, all carrying dry hay and straw to burn.

Arrived at the spot, they found Madame Euler still lying face downward on the grass, very little injured. The poor coachman was lying nearly insensible, and for forty-eight hours his case was precarious. After burning much hay and straw to drive away the bees, M. Euler and his helpers were able to examine the suffering horses. One was so maddened by the stinging it had received that he died the same day; the other was taken to Schmogelsdorf and placed under the care of a veterinary surgeon, but the poor animal died on the following day. M. Euler, in attempting afterwards to assign a probable reason for this fierce attack, supposed that when the horses had been seen to rub against each other a queen bee was annoying one of them; that the rubbing crushed her, and that the attack by the swarm was an expression of the bees' resentment for the murder of their queen. Others sought no further than this for an explanation: That there were, at that time, no less than 2,000 hives of bees in the commune of Schmogelsdorf, and that this number (greatly beyond the usual limit) increased the probability of attacks on men and animals.

Women Under Difficulties.

The first sentiment that gains expression when a female convict finds herself in the reception room of the penitentiary is that of regard for her personal appearance. It happens thus: by the rules of the prison the hair of the inmate is cut to the regulation length, and this operation calls forth from the unfortunate woman curses and prayers, tears and wheedling entreaties, some times even the fiercest resistance. She may have plotted murder, may have poisoned her own child, or committed any other crime, without the quiver of an eyelid, but she cannot submit to the indignity of having her locks reduced by the shears of the penitentiary. Less painful and often amusing instances of vanity are seen later in the woman's prison life; and the matron, who accompanies us, assures us that it is one of the most serious duties of her class to check the love of display which shows itself even here. One woman, for instance, appeared on a certain day with brilliantly painted cheeks; the whole ward was at once restless with envy and curiosity; the embellishment was a decided success, and the secret irritated the feminine mind almost beyond endurance. The prison authorities were at fault also; there was no coloring matter in the woman's cell, or about the building at any point to which she had access. At last, after the closest watching for some time, the secret of the art was laid open. The woman was at work, in common with other convicts, upon blue cotton shirts, through which a red stripe ran; she was accustomed to pull out, here and there, a thread of this last mentioned color, and when a sufficient quantity had accumulated, she would soak them in water, and thus obtain the substitute for rouge. Other women scrape the whitening from the walls, and grind it fine enough to use as powder for the face.

The windows of certain cells had wire netting before them. From these Ball would abstract stiffeners to serve as substitutes for bones. The wires being withdrawn with discretion, here and there, their absence was not discovered. One Sunday, however, the ingenious woman faintly aware in church, a victim to tight lacing; and so the trick was detected. This same woman was the inventor of a favorite kind of pomade, made from an occasional candle, or from the grease of her dinner, and with the aid of this she would turn out in the morning with her hair rolled in the highest style of fashion. Her prison bonnets would be refashioned in the darkness of night into shapes totally unlike their original form; and she was the leader of the de la in the matter of the caps furnished as a part of the regular costume. All the women indeed, show a high degree of ingenuity in making the ugly articles last mentioned into presentable affairs. The matron tells us that there is quite a series of fashions during the year with them. One woman will start a new border, or new tucks and plates behind, or introduce a piece of wire to give the thing a semblance of some lines; if the new idea meets the approval of the other women it becomes "the style," and it is at once adopted with more or less success.

No savage could value a piece of glass more highly than does the average female convict. She will break her window—the cells at Millbank have glazed apertures for light—lament over the "accident" with well-acted grief, and most cunningly secrete a bit of the glass where the closest search fails to discover it; then smoking one side over her lamp, or making a back of black cloth, she will exult in secret over the miserable apology for a mirror, and, as the matron says, will behave with propriety for weeks, only because she has this well-spring of joy in her cell. [Harper's Magazine.]

Major Wilson, commanding the 3d cavalry Missouri State Militia, has made an official report of the result of a fight recently had with a party of guerrillas between Pilot Knob and the Arkansas line. The casualty list of the rebel marauders is peculiar. They lost in killed thirty, mortally wounded three, slightly wounded two. The Major took one hundred and twelve prisoners and all the property of the party.

THE BEST SKATE RINK OUTDOOR—Among the numerous fancy skaters on the Public Garden pond within the last few days no one has attracted more attention than a young man who, having lost one leg, has learned to skate with the other alone. With some assistance from a crutch, he propels himself vigorously over the ice, and darts among the shifting crowd with as much apparent ease as if he was fully supplied with the usual means of locomotion.—Boston Post, Dec. 30.

Proclamation by the Governor.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

FRANKFORT, KY., Jan. 8, 1864.

The frequent outrages perpetrated in various parts of the State by lawless bands of marauders, can in a large degree be traced to the active aid of rebel sympathizers in our midst, or their neglect to furnish to Military Commandants the information, in their possession, which would lead to the defeat and capture of such marauders.

Sympathizers with the rebellion who, while enjoying protection from the Government, abuse the leniency extended to them by concealing the movements of rebel guerrillas, by giving them information, affording them shelter, supplying them with provisions, and otherwise encouraging and fomenting private raids, are in criminal complicity with all the outrages perpetrated by the marauders whom they secretly countenance.

It is in the power of persons whose sympathies are with the rebellion to prevent guerrilla raids, almost invariably, by furnishing to Military Officers of the United States or State of Kentucky, the information which experience has proved them to be, as a general thing, possessed of.

If all would unite, as is their duty, in putting down guerrillas, we should soon cease to be troubled with their raids. A neglect to afford all assistance and information which may aid in defeating the designs of marauding parties, can but be construed as a culpable and active assistance to our enemies.

I, therefore, request that the various Military Commandants in the State of Kentucky will, in every instance where a loyal citizen is taken off by bands of guerrillas, immediately arrest at least five of the most prominent and active rebel sympathizers in the vicinity of such outrage for every loyal man taken by guerrillas. These sympathizers should be held as hostages for the safe and speedy return of the loyal citizens. Where there are disloyal relatives of guerrillas, let them learn that if they refuse to exert themselves actively for the assistance and protection of the loyal, they must expect to reap the just fruits of their complicity with the enemies of our State and people. THO. E. BRAMLETTE, Governor.

COMPOUND

CEDRON BITTERS.

The Latest and Most Important Discovery of the 19th Century.

NO MAN'S name is more intimately connected with the history of the Materia Medica of the United States, or more favorably known as a pioneer in Medical discovery, than that of Dr. JOHN BULL, of Louisville, Ky. His initiation into the preparation of Sarsaparilla, has long stood at the head of the various compounds of that valuable drug. His CORONADO PECTORAL, or WILD CHERRY, has become a household word throughout the West and South; and his Worm Lozenges, in less than a year after their introduction attained a reputation as wide spread as the continent of North America. But the crowning glory of his life remains to be attained in his latest discovery, or rather combination, for he does not claim to have been the discoverer of CEDRON, which is the basis of the bitters now offered to the public. That honor belongs to the native inhabitants of Central America, to whom its virtues have been known for more than two hundred years. Armed with it the Indian braves defied the most deadly malaria, and banishes, without fear, the most venomous serpents. It is a belief with them that while there is breath left in the body, the Cedron is potent to cure, no matter what the disease may be.

While Dr. Bull is not prepared to endorse this extravagant pretension, he is, nevertheless satisfied from a thorough examination of the evidence relating to its virtues, that as a remedy and preventive for all diseases arising from exposure, either to changes of weather and climate, or to the malarious influence, it stands without a rival, and justly deserves the reputation it has so long enjoyed in Central America and the West Indies.

DYSPEPSIA,

and its attendant train of symptoms, it acts more like a charm than a medicine. There is nothing in the whole range of Materia Medica, that can for a moment bear comparison with it in this disease.

A full account of this wonderful plant may be found in the 11th edition of the U. S. Dispensatory, pages 1387 and 1388.

A series of experiments in which Dr. Bull has been for years engaged, has just been brought to a successful termination, and he is now enabled to offer to the public a combination of Cedron with other approved tonics, the whole presented in the best quality of copper distilled Bourbon whisky, which he is confident has no equal in the world.

He might furnish a volume of certificates, but the public have long since learned to estimate such things at their true value. The safest plan is, for every one to test for himself the virtues of a new medicine. Give the one trial, and you will never use any others.

It is not necessary to publish a long list of diseases for which the Cedron Bitters are a specific.

In all diseases of the STOMACH, BOWELS, LIVER, OR KIDNEYS:

In all affections of the BRAIN, DEPENDING UPON DERANGEMENT OF THE STOMACH OR BOWELS:

IN GOUT, RHEUMATISM AND NEURALGIA:

And in FEVER AND AGUE;

It is destined to supersede all other remedies. It not only cures these diseases, but it PREVENTS them.

A wine glass full of the Bitters taken an hour before each meal, will obviate the ill effects of the most unhealthy climate, and screen the person taking it against disease under the most trying exposure.

Sold by Druggists and Grocers generally.

AUDITOR'S OFFICE,

Frankfort, July 2, 1903.

No. 20, Renewal.

This is to certify, that J. M. Mills, as Agent of the Etna Insurance Company of Hartford, Conn., at Frankfort, Franklin county, has filed in this office the statements and exhibits required by the provisions of an act, entitled "An act to regulate Agents of Foreign Insurance Companies," approved March 3, 1903; and it having been shown to the satisfaction of the undersigned that said Company is possessed of an actual capital of at least one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, as required by said act, the said J. M. Mills, as Agent as aforesaid, is hereby licensed and permitted to take risks and transact business of insurance at his office in Frankfort for the term of one year from the date hereof. But this license may be revoked if it shall be made to appear to the undersigned that since filing of the statements above referred to, the available capital of said Company has been reduced below one hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

[L.S.] In testimony whereof, I have set my hand the day and year above written.

GRANT GREEN, Auditor.
